

MISAPPREHENSIONS.

HE WAS A teacher in a remote Illinois country district. No one knew her as she drove slowly along the muddy turnpike. Seeing a man loading hay from a stack near the road, she reined her horse.

"Ho, hullo! can you tell me where Mr. Todd, the school director, lives?" she shouted against the strong March wind blowing in her face.

The man got off the stack and came to the fence. He could not come to the buggy, because turnpiking the road had made a ditch, which was filled with water by the spring thaw. So he stood by the fence, with one foot on the lower board, as she repeated her question.

"I'm him," was the laconic reply.

"I wished to see you about the school. I'm a teacher."

He regarded her with a contemplative stare for a minute.

"Humph!" he said, breaking a long splinter off the top board and chewing it meditatively.

"Well, you drive round to the house behind them poplars. There's nobody home, but I'll be up presently."

She saw in the direction indicated by his hand a farmhouse, beyond a double windbreak of Lombardy poplars.

"Keep well to the left as you turn the corner. The bottom is all out, where the sun gets to the frost," he called after her.

"And you hired her, father?"

"Yes," replied Mr. Todd from the depths of his weekly paper.

Mrs. Todd and her son, Morton, had been to the village six miles away, with butter and eggs. They brought the mail for the neighborhood.

"But the other directors?" pursued Mrs. Todd.

"Too muddy for a woman to be rid-the sitting-room lamp. The mosquitoes are getting troublesome out here."

As she read "Wake Robin" aloud in softly modulated tones a new world opened to the boy.

Years after Morton Todd looked back from the chair of natural history in the state university to that evening as the impetus of his intellectual life, and feels glad his companion did not suspect what was then in his foolish young head.

The full June moon shone upon two walking slowly along the country road. A young man in gray jeans, trousers tucked in his boots, and the school teacher. She was going home from the spelling school and the mile road was so lonely.

Some steps led over the fence to a path across the pasture.

"Let us go this way," she suggested.

The fire-flies were flashing over the damp meadow and she sat at the top step a moment to look at them. He took his hat off and stood beside the steps.

"I wish I could tell you something," he began, hesitatingly.

"I will gladly listen," said the sympathetic voice, encouragingly.

A tale of wrongdoing, dishonesty and deception followed, in an eager burst of confidence.

"I don't know why I tell you. I hate it. I must live better!"

"A man needs woman's sympathy to rise," she said, as he grasped her hand. Then she came down the steps.

"This soft moonlight makes me think of Tillie May," she went on, gently.

"I do not know what her father would do with all those boys without her. She is always so loving and bright."

Then the conversation drifted to other topics.

Tillie May makes an excellent wife. The upright young farmer remembers a night in June when he first thought of her in that light, and is glad that he did not continue his confidences with his unsuspecting companion.

July is ended, and the school term with it. Mr. Barnes, the other director, has just signed the last money order and handed it to the teacher.

REV. SAM JONES.

The Revivalist Had a Parting Bit of Fun With His Audience.

An amusing incident occurred at the close of Sam Jones' sermon at Pulaski the other day. Stepping down from the pulpit, folding his hands across his breast and looking solemnly over the audience, the great revivalist said:

"I want all the women in this crowd who have not spoken a harsh word or harbored an unkind thought toward their husbands for a month past to stand up."

One old woman, apparently on the shady side of 60, stood up.

"Come forward and give me your hand," said the preacher.

The woman did so.

"Now turn and let this audience see the best looking woman in the country."

After taking her seat the revivalist addressed the men:

"Now, I want all the men in this crowd who have not spoken a hard word or harbored an unkind thought toward their wives, to stand up."

Twenty-seven great big, strapping fellows hopped out of the audience with all the alacrity of champagne corks.

"Come forward and give me your hands, my dear boys."

Jones gave each one a vigorous shake after which he ranged them all side by side in front of the pulpit and facing the audience. He looked them over carefully and solemnly, and then, turning around to the audience, he said:

"I want you all to take a good look at the twenty-seven biggest liars in the state of Tennessee."—Hartwell Sun.

Preposterous Proposition.

Traveler—"You have a magnificent farm for sheep raising, but I don't see any sheep on the place."

Arkansaw Farmer—"Sheep? No, my dogs would kill 'em off in no time."

"Then why don't you kill off your dogs?"

"Kill off my dogs? Say, don't let any of my folks hear you talkin' that-a-way. Why, Great Scott, mister, them hounds of mine have brought me more than $50 in clean cash in the last three years fur premiums at dog shows!"

She Always Does.

"His mother-in-law has gone to see him again."

"I shouldn't think she would."

"Why not?"

"He called her an old cat the last time she was to see him."

"Well, she justifies the name—the cat came back, you know."

Tobacco-Stinking Breath.

Not pleasant to always carry around, out it don't compare with the nerve-destroying power that tobacco keeps at work night and day to make you weak and impotent. A Small Boy's Good Memory.

One of the dentists of this city has a precocious child of about four summers. The bright little fellow keeps his father and mother wide awake during the whole day by his wit and keenness. When the child was about two years of age his parents visited Niagara Falls. Baby went along. The other day a friend of the family was at the house, and she spoke of Niagara. The 4-year-old quickly spoke up that he had been there. His mother told him that he certainly could not remember it, but the child said that he could. His mother asking him what it looked like, Johnnie replied: "It looks like a great big ocean going awful fast."—Albany Journal.

A young lady at a box party one night desired a chapman as "one who got out of the way whenever there was a chap around."

I'm All Unstrung.

Is the remark of many a nervous individual. He or she will soon cease to talk that way after beginning and persisting in a course of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Nothing like it to renew strength and appetite and good digestion. It checks the inroads of malaria, and remedies liver complaint, constipation, dyspepsia, rheumatism and kidney disorder. It is in every sense a great household remedy.

It may not be invariably true that fine feathers make fine birds, but in the case of the parrot they certainly do make a brilliant conversationalist.

Blowing Out a Candle Through a Brick.

"You wouldn't have believed it possible to blow out a candle flame through a brickbat," remarked a celebrated physician, whose penchant is to give scientific research a practical bearing. "It can be done, however, and it illustrates the all-pervasive qualities of air. Most rooms are largely ventilated through their walls, and the brick and mortar are merely very rudimentary lungs, which take in and throw out the atmosphere with little hindrance."

"You may try the experiment yourself. Place a candle on the other side of your brick and use two funnels, with the flaring ends on the opposite sides of the brickbat, with the small end of one in line with your mouth and the small end of the other trained on the candle flame. The least breath will make the light flicker, and a hearty expiration will extinguish it altogether. Try it and see."—Toledo Blade.
